ABSTRACT

A circuit and method for measuring pollution on an AC power line is described. After attenuation of the AC power signal, the remaining signal is differentiated, rectified and smoothed to provide a DC signal representative of the pollution which can be viewed on an ordinary meter.